SAFECALL

Safety for Mobile and Lone workers

Trusted technology that makes your workers safer

Most agencies are aware of the risks that workers face when working alone in the community. Very few have a comprehensive way of responding to threatening behavior or a physical assault.

Generally, workers' visits and meetings will go well and they will come out of the activity safe and sound. But on the occasion when something goes terribly wrong it is essential for both the worker and the employer to be able to react effectively.

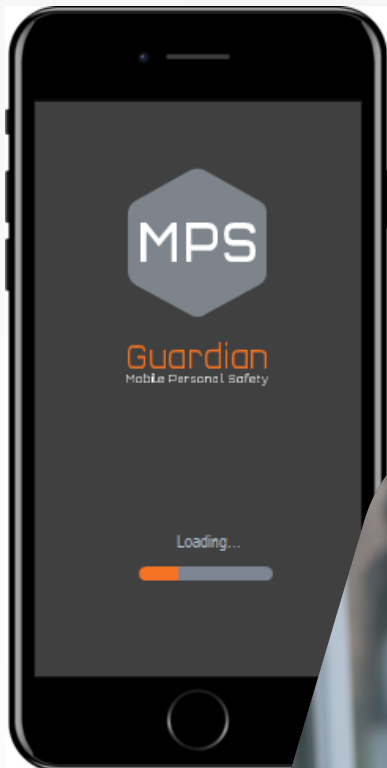

An irate client begins to shout and make threats. Your employee is now truly alone. Calling for help could make the situation worse.

Almost every agency suggests to workers that if something goes wrong they should call 911. That is good advice and no-one should ever be discouraged from using the 911 service.

It can be challenging, though, to reach for a phone, enter a password, dial 911, engage in a conversation with a dispatcher while being threatened with physical harm. Some victims elect not to call for help for fear of further aggravating their attacker.

The Safecall panic button gives them another solution when 911 won't work. A simple 3-second press of the panic button connects them with an agent who already knows who they are and where they are, and can hear what is happening. No conversation is needed. The agent can decide in seconds whether police help is required and quickly dispatch a car to the location.

As soon as the button is pressed, your management team will get notification of the incident by text and e-mail, allowing you to take steps to help the worker.

More about GuardianMPS

Protecting the worker is by far the most important objective and Safecall gives them 2 extra ways of calling for help – using the panic button or using the app to check in and out of timed activities.

If they don't check out on time a safety protocol is launched and it won't stop until the worker's status has been established and management/supervisors are notified.

Protecting the Management and Supervisors is important too; an attack on a worker can lead to internal investigations, OSHA inspections, fines and even litigation for high compensatory amounts. And the supervisor has to live with the aftermath; "Did we do enough to protect them?"

Guardian Safecall is a comprehensive system of apps, devices, maps and trained alarm response agents.

The safety of your workers is greatly enhanced. And the responsibility, accountability and liability of the organization and the management team can be mitigated.

Developed in line with the most stringent personal safety standard in the world, Guardian Safecall makes your workers, you and your organization a much safer place from which to care for the community..
